SRV (ERV)

Site was previously described location. Road/runway type thing had the concept of runway associated with it. It had black on it but the edges blended into the surrounding landscape. (AOL: of experimental flight test facility- Edwards AFB).

A satellite was associated with what was going on. N

The thing previously described as pointing up at 45-50 degrees has the purpose of tracking and timing.

At some point something fell from the sky and drove into the ground (at a location quite distant from the site), throwing up a massive amount of brown dirt into the air. (AOL: penetration missile exploding.) I couldn't tell if this was related to the site.

Back at the site, I watched the runway. Nothing seemed to take off from it. Something only landed with a loud screaming noise of shearing metal on metal. This noise drove me into a building. The building was open inside, several stories high like a hangar. Nothing was inside except for some tall support structures with platforms on top. In a smaller building nearby was a uniformed man watching a TV screen. He was not very smart and was not involved in what was going on. (AOL/S security guard).

Associated with the site was a strong feeling of something or someone going awry.

Associated with the site was the strong feeling of government.
